

A few bits of this and that this week!

 Sunshine is teasing us all this week. Two days in a row we have had sunny afternoons and put that together with daylight savings time and we have spring fever showing up everywhere. Yesterday I saw lots of residents out walking and enjoying the turn in the weather. I even saw a bicyclist exploring the streets of Stillwaters. We are seeing more birds, deer and other wildlife so I guess I am suggesting that humans and animals alike are rising up from the winter dull drums and preparing for a beautiful spring and summer in Stillwaters Estates.

Saturday is a big recycling event here in Stillwaters. “Haul it All” , a local metal recycling specialist will be on site to take away all things metal that residents no longer need. The pick up location will be behind the Gathering Place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday the 15th (Tomorrow). Some examples of what they will take: Old microwaves, Christmas lights, heaters, washers, metal lawn furniture, lamps, toasters, VCRs, etc. This is a first time for us to host this event so take advantage of the opportunity and let the office know if this was useful to you.

Salt is in the news: Did you know this is “World Salt Awareness Week”? Salt is a hard one to manage (I think) because if you get too much it can cause health issues, too little and your food can be bland. Check out the website here at <http://www.cdc.gov/features/sodium/> for more information. Here are some helpful tips for reducing your salt intake, from the website. At the grocery store – try to avoid processed food (packaged). At the restaurant ask the chef to not add extra salt to your food and at home, eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables and avoid canned vegetables unless you purchase no-salt added vegetables.
