

The weather has definitely been the topic of conversation this week! We had predictions for snowy weather Tuesday that didn't materialize and then behold Wednesday:

It was so beautiful and cold!

Today I went out early to take some chilly pictures (25 degrees) and came back with these two gems:

Such a beautiful neighborhood, just about anytime of year I think.

If you get a chance to look out at the moon tonight you will see (if not cloudy) an amazing January full moon. According to the Old Farmer's Almanac this January moon has traditionally been called Old Moon, or to Native American Tribes, the Full Wolf Moon.

Click HERE to go to the website and see the fun facts, including a video. Here is a photo of the almost full moon from here in Stillwaters on Wednesday.

Quote of the Week:

Weather:

Well, after this very chilly weather this week, next week is supposed to be a big change. Warmer weather and very wet. Time for the umbrellas again!

Have a good week ahead – stay off the ice!